YMCA Challenger programs, such as soccer at the Fred and Shirley Pryor YMCA Challenger Sports Complex, give youth like Alison the opportunity to be physically active, have fun with friends and learn social skills.

"She's made lots of new friends...and she's learning how to interact with them and help them out when they need help as well," said Alison's mom, Brenda.

Tahkeeyah is able to work to support her family as well as take classes to become a nurse, while her three children receive quality care and education at Thomas Roque YMCA Head Start.

"They treat everybody as family. Like these are their kids...Without Head Start, I wouldn't know what I would do," Tahkeeyah said.

Our food programs provide youth in after school Y Club nourishment and lessons on healthy choices. They also fill an important need. More than 60 percent of Y Club participants across the metro are from families with incomes at or below poverty level.

"We know that...literally thousands of our kids, if we didn't provide that meal for them, they would go without," said James Spearin, Senior Vice President of Youth Development.

Reanna has learned new skills such as how to float on her back, and built confidence along the way. That has also given her mom confidence that Reanna will be safe.

"I did not take swim lessons as a child...so to see my child be able to have this gift and be able to swim, that's wonderful to me," said Reanna's mom, Tiara.

The Y offers evidence-based programs that improve health and well-being. One program is EnhanceFitness, designed to increase mobility and comfort for people with arthritis, like Olathe Family YMCA member Claudia.

Coming to class has helped her manage severe pain, improve her posture and keep moving.

"I feel like if I hadn't started coming to the Y, I would not be walking today," Claudia said.
